PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Hello!

I hope your welts from Eng Vs. Agro Paintball aren't too bad, and I'm sure the Agros have it worse! If you didn't buy a paintball ticket, I want you to take a hard look at yourself in the mirror and ask yourself, "Why am I like this?". Y'all complain about low morale in engineering but never attend events. Sad.

But, we have another opportunity to kick Agro ass on Tuesday at College Splash (the epic water balloon fight). Meet in the lounge at 11:30am and bring something that you don't mind getting wet in. Also, make sure you have your student card so you can shower in the PAC afterwards.

Speaking of events, IEEE has some stuff going on at the end of this week, something about some delicious, golden, frothy liquid that's all-you-can-drink? I'm getting thirsty all of a sudden. And if you're still thirsty next week, be sure to get a bunch of friends together (preferably the heavyweights) and sign up for the annual Eng vs. Ag BEvERage Olympics for next week.

Midterms are starting to pop up now, so if you haven't been going to class, it's probably for the best if you check the website or syllabus and double check when your first midterm will be. Can't have you guys failing out because of a midterm now, can we?

What else is going on this week...? Check out the next few pages to find out!

Anyways, here's your weekly joke:

- The fact that the Agro's think they're better than us.

Thinking about how it's 5 o'clock somewhere,

Dayne G.

100 YEARS FLASHBACK

1977: Wine and Cheese

To commemorate women in engineering, an annual event was held where engineers would gather to enjoy, well, some wine and cheese! This tradition was popular throughout the '70s and early '80s. This year, APEGS and FEAT are hosting a similar event called WC<sup>2</sup> (see above!)
